The Nightingale Conference 2022

Welcome to The Nightingales 11th Internationale Conference 24-25 February 2022 in Lillehammer, Norway. The topic for the conference is Reflect, re-think, and re-story in supervision.

Did not find resource: /om-hogskolen/fakultet-for-helse-og-sosialvitenskap/arrangementer-fra-hsv/nattergalkonferansen/index.html

The supervision in the Nightingale gives mentors the possibility to reflect upon their own experiences, create new narratives and get a better understanding of others perspective. New narrative which in best will not tolerate injustice – opposite the perspective that demand harder punishment, feel frustration - which often grow in fear and when people do not meet or reflect. You can almost say the Nightingale is the peace-project we need today, especially when fundamental movements and nationalism are spreading and when intolerance and xenophobia are creating invisible walls preventing people from taking part in society.

At this network meeting we will discuss how supervision can help the mentors to create new narratives and a better understanding of their own action so that mentoring will not only become learning by doing but also learning by reflective doing. Supervision is one way to put words on one's own experiences and reflect upon them, and as Dewey once said we do not learn from experience, we learn from reflecting on experience.

The mentoring programme Nightingale runs at eight Universities and University Colleges in Norway and it is supported by the Directorate of Children, Youth and Families (Bufdir).

The Nightingale Program is part of an international network. Please visit The Nightingale Network's website.

Speakers

On this network meeting we will have the great honour to listen to the key note speaker

Sunil Loona who is a trained psychologist, with post-graduate degrees in psychology from both India and Norway. He has extensive experience in working with minority students.

Sunil Loona is founder member of the Anti-Racist Center in Oslo. As a researcher he has written several academic articles on various topics related to minority issues.

His perspective is a class, structural racism and poverty.

We will discuss and listen to partners experiences of supervision, from different perspective:

- The supervisors

What is happening in supervision? (New narratives by reflection, rethinking and re-storying) Taking the perspectives of others; the child's and the caregivers. Improving self-knowledge, self-reflection, and a better self-efficacy. The learning process. The reflective practitioner (Kolb and Donald Schon)

- The mentors

What problems do mentors struggle? What are their experiences?

What do they highlight in their diaries, reflection notes and monthly reports?

What are they thinking between the meetings and what do they point out at the end of the mentoring period?

- The practitioner—four different examples of supervisions

1. Intercultural exchange across borders – Introducing the concept of IRIS (Intercultural Reflective Interactive Space)

The presentation introduces the concept of IRIS (Intercultural Reflective Interactive Space) and the experiences of the first pilot run. The concepts behind the four letters will be outlined as pillars of the concept. A short report of the first pilot run, which took place between mentors of the Nightingale at PH Zug and FU Berlin, first findings are presented and possibilities for an extension to other partners of the International Nightingale Network are discussed. This will be the first introduction of the concept of IRIS (Intercultural Reflective Interactive Space)

2. Narratives by experiences

In this research project you will hear more about how students and mentors wrote stories from their own experiences in meetings with other. The stories were written in a I-perspective, read in the seminars, and discussed. Next time student and mentors had to write the same stories again, but now from another perspective – a method inspired by “stories to live by” (Clandinin and Connelly.)

3. Individual and collective dynamics of student-centred supervision

Gaining experiences as a mentor through the connection of sensory-aesthetic perception and (self-reflective practices)

4. How to increase self-understanding and awareness through the use of creative methods and activities in mentorship is a local integration project and is a place where everybody should feel a belonging, and a place where they are listened to. A place where children and young people can share their own history, their talents, their language, and their culture. We are children and young people from many different countries and during the schoolyear we will present various performances by the assistance of professional artists.

Carol Kvande is a professional singer, actor, music teacher and director. She comes from South Africa and is a permanent director for 'Cultural Heart'. Janne Aasebø Johnsen is a teacher, author, dramatist, and publisher. She comes from Norway and is a permanent writer for 'Cultural Heart'. Both live in Lillehammer.
